Watcher Pro is an application which enables you to keep an eye on your PC when you leave it alone. You can configure the application to start automatically when your system is left alone for a certain period of time, even when you're away from your PC. Your PC will be woken up every time you start to work on it. If you have a complex setup you might want to configure the application to start a second instance of itself to monitor a second system. For such setups you need to set up two Watcher Pro hosts. If you don't want to use two hosts, you can configure Watcher Pro to watch two PCs on one host. With a few clicks, you can configure a couple of monitoring rules, specifying when and what you want Watcher to watch for. You can define rules based on the applications you are currently using, on the system uptime, the CPU load, the RAM usage, the network activity, or any combination of these. When Watcher Pro detects one of the monitored conditions, it takes appropriate action. It can send you an email, start a log, or make a beep, to notify you about a condition. It can even connect to a remote system and take action there, if needed. Watcher Pro supports many popular protocols, including UPnP, and you can even extend it to use custom protocols. It also includes a lot of custom actions and displays you can use to interact with your monitoring environment. For example, you can create a log entry for each logged event, with details that can be filtered later. Watcher Pro can create a nice log, with log levels defined in an easily customizable manner. Watcher Pro provides a simple configuration interface, where you can specify the type of parameters you want to watch, what parameters you want to display in the interface, and where you want the interface to be available on your system. If you want to see Watcher's interface at a particular moment in time, you can configure a timed mode. Watcher Pro features:

- Can monitor Windows 2000/XP/2003/2008/Vista/7/8
- Can monitor multiple systems on a single host (useful for large setups)
- Can monitor multiple computers on a single host
- Can monitor a single computer via UPnP (useful for wireless setups)
- A simple configuration interface
- Configurable log entries
- Log file export
- Can monitor for "drive activity"

Nail Care Habits: Why we need regular manicures

Nails should be clean, trimmed and shaped weekly in between professional manicures. Nails should be cleaned regularly with a cleanser. Do not use soap on your nails as it may cause the cuticle to break or cause your nail to dry out more quickly. Using a cuticle oil is a good idea, but it is not necessary. Using a nail cleanser should not be painful. Nail cuticles are very soft and elastic. If they are cut and stretched, they will grow back. However, if you pierce the cuticle with a sharp object, you may end up with white spots. While you should try to cut your own nails, do not cut nails longer than necessary. Too short nails can look unsightly and look thinner. Always file nails, but only for a few seconds. Cuticles need to breathe, which is why they are so soft. If you file your nails too much, you will break the cuticle. Do not file cuticles, and do not use nail buffers, other than your flat top/glove or disposable. To use a nail buffer, make sure you only file down to the free edge of the cuticle and toenail bed. In addition, the nail bed should be regularly cut and filed down to a very smooth surface. This will help in forming a natural shine on your nails. Also, it will make your nails feel and look younger. To strengthen the nails, you can use a solution of lemon juice mixed with vegetable oil. Always take a little off your cuticles before using this solution and dip the nails in it. Then you can file them off. To keep nails healthy, use a paraben free nail and cuticle oil.
