Twelve weeks ago, Adobe shocked us all when they announced the bad news that Photoshop will no longer sell on disc. Of course this was a huge blow for all the photographers who thought this might actually make it easier to share their creative projects with friends and coworkers. However, the good news is that you can now use Photoshop on the web. To use it, simply go to Photoshop.com. You'll have to download the Adobe package, but this is a very small file. It just takes a few minutes to download and install. If you're running a web-based site you can easily create web-based Photoshop files directly from a web site. Additionally, Photoshop offers the ability to work with vector data-based graphics, including bitmaps, vector-based, and layered vector graphics. However, as of today, it is not possible to create vector-based artwork directly in Photoshop. At its core, Photoshop is a vector editor, which inherently means it's possible to create and edit images in vector rather than raster. Since it's possible to adjust vector-based artwork to any line width, it's much easier to comply to print standards. Photoshop is built on a robust system of layers, which are sequences of raster and vector-based data that can be moved and merged in order to produce an outcome. You can create new layers, make custom type tools, create text effects, and apply filters with a lot of ease.
